

Greg Segalla, an engineer, and Carmen Clark, a lactation consultant at the Albert Einstein College of Medicine.

Caleb Lentchner, general manager and chef at Marsha Brown, and Kari Adams, founder of Princeton Elite Club.

U.S. 1 Crashes a Party

PRINCETON ELITE CLUB'S 'SEXY BLACK HALLOWEEN SOIREE,' MARSHA BROWN RESTAURANT, NEW HOPE, FRIDAY, OCTOBER 30

Who says you have to look scary on Halloween? More than 30 singles (and a few couples!) attended Princeton Elite Club's "Sexy Black Halloween Soiree" on Friday, October 30, at Marsha Brown restaurant in New Hope. Club founder Kari Adams ("If Darwin Were Alive and Single, He'd Be in This Club." U.S. 1, August 19) hosted the affair from the cozy third floor loft (the former choir loft) at the restaurant, which is housed in a restored 125-year-old stone church at 15 South Main Street.

chemist to podiatrist/surgeon (the latter, Kim Grum, took home the prize for sexiest black outfit). There were also the requisite online entrepreneurs: Steven Hudes is the founder of happy-pregnancy.com, a Princeton-based maternity clothing website, and Adrienne Ragland, who by day works in the global voice products division of Verizon Wireless, is developing her own online women's magazine, lovelylifemagazine.com, set to launch in January, 2010.

Nobody went hungry, thanks to the Cajun-inspired food — including fried crawfish risotto, duck meatballs, tuna sashimi, coconut shrimp, baked potato croquettes, beef crostini, lollipop lamb shop, crab cakes, and sesame chicken.

Adams says she's already planning her next color-themed event, a "Red Hot New Year's Eve." She encourages interested singles to stay tuned to www.princetoneliteclub.com for details.

— Jamie Saxon

Guests traveled from as far away as Clifton, NJ, and Mechanicsburg, PA — and in our opinion boasted some of the most diverse professions we've ever seen at a "crash" — from lactation consultant to veterinarian to organic

P.S. The two Junior Leaguers in attendance, Debby Lang of Prudential Fox Roach and Molly Hoke of Pfizer, reminded us that 2010 is showhouse year. Look for the Junior League of Greater Princeton's showhouse this spring.

Adrienne Ragland, global voice products division of Verizon Wireless headquartered in Basking Ridge, and founder of lovelylifemagazine.com, an online women's magazine launching in January, 2010.

Kurt Krusen, a veterinarian in Mechanicsburg, PA.

Joyce Madee, assistant director of student employment at Rutgers University, left, and Tetyana Luczaj, investment sales for Citizens Bank corporate headquarters in Plymouth Meeting, PA.

Peter Donan, director of government solutions for Starpoint Solutions, an IT firm headquartered in New York.

Winners of the sexiest outfits: Kim Grum, a podiatrist/surgeon in Jamison, PA (also pictured below with her husband, Jack Grum, executive VP of Weather Trends, a weather technology company in Bethlehem, PA), and Eric Lintner, CEO of Dale Corporation, a construction and development firm in Glenside, PA.

Bob Kane, regional VP with First Senior Financial Group in Valley Forge, PA.

Steven Hudes, left, founder of happy-pregnancy.com, a Princeton-based maternity clothing website.

Debby Lang, a realtor with Prudential Fox Roach in Princeton, left; Molly Hoke, a chemist with Pfizer; and Judy Stolz, a senior purchasing agent with ImClone in Branchburg.

Pavell and Paulina Trubetskoy, owners of Netfrate, a freight logistics firm in Skillman; and Angelo Greco, a pharmacist with docbakery.com, an online health shop.

Heather Kay, a lactation consultant with Robert Wood Johnson Hospital in Hamilton, and Jim Lamon, an engineer with First Solar in Bridgewater.

